POLLUTION: MONTH #032

"rather pure air despite the fact that i am now living in a more industrial part of town and have in the last month covered big distances on foot but the cold and nice weather has kept the air rather clean apart for some time spent in copenhagen with much polluted traffic and people smoking everywhere and then another period in italy having to walk from the airport to bergamo with quite a big load of traffic but then again being up the alps and breathe pure air particularly at very high altitudes like over two thousand meters with much thin air"

POLLUTION: MONTH #033

"a period characterized by much pollution inhaled first on my trip over christmas down to the north of italy landing in bergamo and walking to the center from the airport inhaling much exhaustion gases and then also in my parents city taking jacek around and still breathing quite a bit of the traffic but then finally some fresh air up in the mountains from which i left to go to southern poland and find a totally stagnant air fully condensed with coal still used from soviet times to warm up many houses in the slightly depressed plateau where krakow lays and thus getting to breath that bad air with jacek really wanting to reach a monastery out of the city outskirts but then going to a much cleaner location in the small mountains of the alsazia region to then get back to krakow where the wind has blown and the real winter has sat in leaving a cleaner air yet still having a times to avoid the city traffic by walking from jacek's house to the center by the big river but at last coming to the totally fresh but icy cold air of sweden"

POLLUTION: MONTH #034

"quite good air quality although i mostly kept indoor apart for a sunny weekend and some cloudy days spent more in the city roaming with my kid and going through a bit of the city traffic"

POLLUTION: MONTH #036

"time spent in bigger cities like berlin finding it particularly clean with some traffic but a bit more suffocating being back in the southern suburb of stockholm with a still air and again the nearby truck factory and the highway but then also going back to my parents in northern italy and finding there even more polluted air with many cars and congestion around the old city center to finally going to visit my girlfriend in the netherlands and again find a rather clean air with moderate traffic outside of the pedestrian city center where anyway there are predominantly bikers"
